MILESTONES

The college was established on 17th July, 1932, by Shyamaprasad Mukherjee, in response to the growing demand for centres of women's education in Kolkata. It began its existence as the women's section of Asutosh College and functioned within the latter's premises in the morning hours. The first Principal of the college was Panchanan Sinha and Vice-principal Kalidas Sen. Distinguished Bengali author, Lila Majumdar was its first professor.

The college became a separate establishment in 1957 when it was delinked from Asutosh College and affiliated to Calcutta University as Asutosh College for Women. It was renamed Jogamaya Devi College in 1958 after the demise of Lady Jogamaya Devi, the noble and spirited wife of Sir Asutosh Mukherjee, and mother of Shyamaprasad Mukherjee.

The women's section of Asutosh College was started with 155 students enrolled for the I.A. course in 1932. It was a matter of great pride for the college that six of its students were rank-holders in the I.A. examination of 1946. Teaching of science subjects began in 1936.

New disciplines were subsequently introduced by its dynamic and farsighted leaders who were always aware of the demands of the changing educational scenario. An annex building was built in 5A, Rajeswar Dasgupta Road in 1992 to accommodate the students enrolled for the new courses. Jogamaya Devi College was the first women's college to start the Geology Honours Course in 1956. The NCC Training Course was started under the leadership of Principal Jyotish Chandra Banerjee. Arundhuti Sen, the first lady principal of the college, began the Zoology (Hons) Course. Principal Dr. Subrata Gupta, introduced the Botany (Hons.), Statistics (Gen.), Sociology (Gen.), B.Com (Gen.) and Communicative English (Major) Courses and also established the Computer Centre. The B.Com (Hons.), Psychology (Hons.) and Sociology (Hons) Courses were introduced by Principal Gargi Nath. She also established the Post-Graduate Study Centre in collaboration with Vidyasagar University. An NSS unit was set up in the college in 2014. Regular PG courses were started from the session 2014-15. B.Com (Hons.) in Taxation and Computer Science (General) courses were introduced from the academic session 2015-16. The college thus evolved from its humble beginnings to its present position as a reputed centre of learning, imparting multi-disciplinary education relevant to the demands of the modern world.
